Scope

The Collection is divided into two parts:

1. Manuscript

Extensive and diverse in its attempt to include all aspects of radicalism in Canada, this collection contains material on:

- a) Communist Party of Canada, including rare leaflets and ephemera
- b) Tim Buck, A.E. Smith and other Canadian Communists
- c) A small number of anti-Communist documents and leaflets, as well as information on various Communist trials and the persecution of alleged Communists
- d) Organizations connected with radicalism and/or Communism in Canada, including briefs written by them to government agencies
- e) Trade unions
- f) Relief Camp Strike, B.C., 1935, including leaflets, bulletins and scrapbook.
- g) Leaflets, some issued by the Communist Party of Canada (including its May Day leaflets); others by various organizations on such topics as peace, Viet Nam, Quebec nationalism, etc.
- h) Articles, including drafts of those submitted to the National Affairs Monthly, and translations and reprints chiefly from Russian publications
- i) Photographs, sound recordings, newspaper clippings, political posters, union medals, campaign ephemera

2. Printed

Includes books, pamphlets, broadsides and periodicals reflecting radicalism throughout Canada's history including the Rebellions of 1838 and 1839, Riel Rebellion, Winnipeg General Strike of 1919, the Doukhobours, Quebec nationalism, trade unionism, etc.

There are a number of books and pamphlets by Canadian Communist leaders such as Tim Buck, Leslie Morris, as well as pamphlets issued by various political groups including the Communist Party of Canada and the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation. There are complete runs of the National Affairs Monthly, the Marxist quarterly and New frontiers, as well as many broken runs and isolated issues of other left-wing periodicals. Among these are rare first issues of early Canadian communist newspapers.

9 January 1998.

Biography

Robert S. Kenny was born in Lindsay, Ontario of Irish descent. He attended school in Lindsay and Galt, graduated in Toronto from Riverdale Collegiate Institute. An avid book collector in many disciplines, Kenny began to collect materials on radicalism in the thirties, having joined the Communist Party of Canada. Part of his collection includes material issued by the Party. In 1977, he sold his collection on Canadian radicalism to the University of Toronto Library.

The Library does not limit the duplication of material, however, the readers have not acquired any rights in regard to further duplication, circulation or publication of this material.
