Helen Weinzweig on Helen Weinzweig, from Biography Resource Center online:

"By the time I began to write, at age forty-five, I had a fair knowledge of what was called experimental writing. I am still excited by new ways of telling old stories. I believe that many of the conventions of fiction, such as plot and chronology and characterization, now belong to movies and television, and much of our evocative language has been appropriated by advertising. In my fiction, I use dislocation of time, juxtaposition of ideas, and arrangement of words in a manner designed to reach an imagination not now being served by mass print and the camera. My personal preoccupation in writing is to explore the elements of appearance and illusion.

Writing is desire, I don't know how or why. I hope to achieve self-discovery in the books I write. Personally, I feel the so-called "mirroring of life" has been taken over completely by movies and television, so that a writer is hard put to be creative. I feel that today the "experimentalists" have synthesized myth and fact, and the intellect and the emotion. The continental writers, in translation, have influenced me, because their approach to storytelling, I feel, is more subtle, intelligent, and certainly more abstract – a sort of "what is going on?" Influences, for example, have included Michel Butor, Alain Robbe-Grillet, Claude Simon Pingent, Djuna Barnes, and from South America, Llosa Vargas, Jorge Luis Borges, and Julio Cortazar."

Helen Weinzweig was born May 21, 1915, in Radom, Poland, emigrating to Canada in 1924. Her parents were Joseph and Lily (a hairdresser, maiden name Wekselman) Tenenbaum. On July 19, 1940 she married Canadian composer John Weinzweig, and together they have two sons, Paul and Daniel. She died in February of 2010 at the age of 94.
