Special Collections Require Special Care

The Fisher Library is dedicated to making the research experience as rewarding and productive as possible for all readers. We ask you to cooperate with us to preserve the library’s collections for posterity by observing the following protocols:

- Please leave all outer wear, bags, binders, and folders in the lockers provided at the second floor entrance.
- Clear plastic bags are available to carry items such as identity cards, computers, tablets, and writing materials into the Reading Room.
- Readers are required to register on their first visit to the library. Valid ID, such as a current University of Toronto card, a driver’s licence, and/or a document bearing the applicant’s name and current address, must be provided before a library card can be issued. The card is valid for two years, and must be presented to Reference and Reading Room staff on each visit.
- The Reading Room is reserved exclusively for registered readers using Rare Book Library materials.
- No more than three printed books, or one box of manuscript material, may be used at one time. Additional material requested will be held for you at the supervisor’s desk.
- Readers using manuscript material will be seated in the first row, adjacent to the Reading Room supervisor’s desk.
- Food and beverages are not permitted anywhere in the Rare Book Library.

How to Request Materials

Fisher Library materials do not circulate. Please be aware that a system of timed retrieval is in place. For details, see the back cover of this brochure, consult the Fisher Library website, or speak to a staff member. Items from the collections may be requested in three ways:

- Request an item directly from the record in the Library Catalogue
- Use the Stack Retrieval Request form on the Fisher Library home page
- Fill out a request slip in person at the Fisher Reference Desk

How to Handle Materials in the Reading Room

- Before handling rare materials please ensure that your hands are clean and dry.
- To avoid potential damage to bindings, please ensure that each book is properly supported on a book rest. Never lay an open book face down on the table. Do not lean on a book, or place other books or objects on it. Book rests and book weights to hold pages open are available from the Reading Room supervisor. Acid-free flyers should be used as bookmarks; they are also available from the supervisor.
- Only pencils should be used for taking notes, as the use of pens may result in the accidental transfer of ink to paper. Pencils are available from the Reading Room supervisor.
- Never mark pages, or write on paper laid on top of a book or manuscript. The tracing of maps or other illustrative material is not permitted. Avoid touching the surface of text, illustration, or illumination on any page.
- Please turn pages slowly and carefully. Extra care should be taken in handling large volumes and those with brittle paper. The same care should be exercised in opening folded plates and maps. If a book is found to have unopened leaves, do not attempt to open them yourself. Please bring the book to the attention of the supervisor who will arrange with the conservator to open them for you.
- When using manuscript material, please maintain the exact order of folders in a box, and of items within a folder. Remove only one folder at a time from a box. Use the acid-free flyers to mark your place. If you suspect an error in the arrangement of the material, please inform the supervisor. Do not rearrange the material yourself.
- When you have finished consulting material, or at the end of the day, return all items to the Reading Room supervisor. If you wish to leave material unattended for more than a few moments, please inform the supervisor. You may request that material be held for you for a specified length of time.

Digital Photography

The Fisher Library provides photographic and digital reproduction services of material from our collections for the purposes of research, teaching, private study, or general interest. All requests for reproduction (self-serve scanning, photography, photocopy) are dependent on the physical condition and copyright status of the item. Manuscript material may not be reproduced without permission.

An overhead book scanner is available free of charge to patrons wishing to make digital reproductions of published material in the Fisher Library collections. When you wish to scan items, please consult with the Reading Room supervisor and the Reference Librarian on duty.

The Fisher Library also offers high resolution imaging services carried out by a highly qualified photographer using an overhead camera. For instructions on how to
